This year's Harvest Charity is the All Saints food point.

All Saints Food Point

Thank you to everyone for your generous donations to the Food Point at Harvest Mass on Sunday.

Did you know :

“In the most deprived wards in Bristol, 1 in 8 households experience moderate to severe food poverty. Around 1/3 of all Bristol’s children are at risk of food insecurity and numbers of children eligible to claim free school meals (children in families with less than £7,400 per annum income before benefits) have risen 20% in the last 2 years’.

Food poverty is the inability to get enough healthy, affordable food. This can be due to lack of income, poor transport to local shops, knowledge about what constitutes a healthy diet, or the skills to create healthy meals.

Food poverty is a complex mix of factor factors, but they result in people on low incomes having the lowest intakes of fruit and vegetables and being far more likely to suffer from diet-related diseases such as cancer, diabetes, obesity and coronary heart disease.

Surplus food is food which is fit for human consumption, but has no commercial value for the retailer. This food, which may ultimately go to waste, may have become damaged in transit, might be past its ‘best before’ date or might have been over-ordered. It’s still perfectly good food, and can be put to good use.

In the UK, an estimated 12 million tonnes of food is wasted each year at all levels from plough to plate whilst 4 million people are affected by food poverty. At least 400,000 tonnes of this food is thrown away at retail level.

Elizabeth Fry, Prison Reformer, 1845

Elizabeth Fry (née Gurney; 21 May 1780 – 12 October 1845), sometimes referred to as Betsy Fry, was an English prison reformer, social reformer, philanthropist and Quaker.

Fry was a major driving force behind new legislation to improve the treatment of prisoners, especially female inmates, and as such has been called the "Angel of Prisons". She was instrumental in the 1823 Gaols Act which mandated sex-segregation of prisons and female warders for female inmates to protect them from sexual exploitation.

Fry visited Newgate Prison in 1813. The conditions she saw there horrified her. Newgate prison was overcrowded with women and children, some of whom had not even received a trial. The prisoners did their own cooking and washing in the small cells in which they slept on straw. Newgate was also the last stop for many before being deported to Australia in ships Fry described—in 1814, 20 years before the abolition of slavery—as little better than slave ships. She returned the following day with food and clothes for some prisoners.

She funded a prison school for the children who were imprisoned with their mothers. Rather than attempt to impose discipline on the women, she suggested rules and then asked the prisoners to vote on them. In 1817, she helped found the Association for the Reformation of the Female Prisoners in Newgate. This association provided materials for women so that they could learn to sew patchwork, which was calming for the women and also helped them develop skills such as needlework and knitting; this opened up a prospect, when in future they were released from prison, of them entering employment and earning money for themselves. This approach was copied elsewhere and led to the eventual creation of the British Ladies' Society for Promoting the Reformation of Female Prisoners in 1821. She also promoted the idea of rehabilitation instead of harsh punishment which was taken on by the city authorities in London as well as many other authorities and prisons.

"A Committee of the House of Commons was appointed to examine into evidence respecting the prisons of the metropolis" and Elizabeth Fry was called to give evidence on 27 February 1818. It is believed that she was the first woman ever to be called to give evidence to a Select Committee of the Houses of Parliament.

The passing of the Gaols Act in 1823 had a limited effect on prison conditions. It was largely ineffective, as it contained no mechanism to ensure its provisions were followed; some institutions, such as town gaols and debtors' prisons, were not regulated by the Act. The one change widely and successfully adopted was the separation of male from female inmates. Fry, whose ideas and representations had been influential in the drafting and passage of the Act, was well aware of the shortcomings in its implementation. She gave evidence to a Select Committee of the House of Lords in 1835, saying of prisons in England and Wales, that, despite the Gaols Act, "in many instances their condition is melancholy...they may truly be called schools for crime" and that some still had "no instruction, no employment, no classification [of inmates]...and they get into a most low and deplorable state of morals...I would not say that all are in that condition, but I fear many are".

Only with the passing of the Prisons Act 1835 were prison inspectors appointed, and all gaols and prisons brought under central control.

ALL SAINTS PRAYERS

Mon 9	Denys, bishop, and companions martyrs c.250 Robert Grosseteste, bishop, philosopher, scientist. 1253 Pray for those priests and academics who study and research into theology in order to increase our knowledge of, inspiration by and understanding of, the things of God. Pray for those who seek to apply theology in church and pastoral practice so that theology has “ legs”.
Tue 10	Paulinus 644 Pray for all who struggle to share the Gospel. Some to great effect and others, struggling equally hard, but with less effect. Ask that we may find ways to share our faith in our own communities and to the best of our ability
Wed 11	Mass 10.00 am Ethelburga, Abbess of Barking, 675 Pray for those who work to understand and protect us from fast spreading infections. Especially those who research epidemics and pandemics. Pray for those medical staff who put their lives on the line in caring for others with serious infections (Covid 19 but also other highly infectious diseases)
Thurs 12	Elizabeth Fry, Prison Reformer, 1845 Pray for those who work to improve conditions inside prison, establish effective penal systems and find alternatives to incarceration.
Fri 13	Mass 10.00 am Edward the Confessor 1066 Edward appointed ‘worldly’ men to senior church positions. He favoured those who were not ‘products’ of the church in senior roles. Pray for clergy who are in senior roles – Bishops Viv and Lee, and all members of the House of Bishops; Archdeacons Neil and Christopher.
Sat 14	Remember in our prayers veterinary practices – surgeons and nurses. Both small and large animal. Remember their importance to maintaining the health of our pets (for some the only companions) to the health of farm animals our source of food
Sunday 13	19th Trinity O God, forasmuch as without you we are not able to please you; mercifully grant that your Holy Spirit may in all things direct and rule our hearts Early Worship 9.00am Parish Mass 10.30am
